Everyone at the competition site is responsible for following national advice and instructions issued by the Public Health Agency. The information is available in several languages.

Crucial to reducing the spread of infection is to immediately isolate yourself in the event of any symptoms, to keep your distance from others and not socialize more than in a small circle.

Rules and advice from authorities must be followed together with our rules and advice. These apply to the entire competition area, camping, parking site and hostels. Team leaders have a special responsibility to ensure that participants follow current regulations and the officials' instructions.

The entire event is audience-free and only accredited may attend the competition venue. Color-coded ribbons showing accreditation must be worn visibly throughout the event by all. The purpose of the color coding is not to mix different groups and thereby reduce the risk of infection spreading. It is expected of each participant to keep a distance of at least 2 meters to others with a different color code and to only move in the areas where the respective color code is allowed. This applies both indoors and outdoors.

Hygiene and distance

You should follow the general hygiene routines such as washing or spraying your hands often, sneezing and coughing in the armpit and do not touch your hands on your face. Avoid having physical contact with other officials and participants. If you want to use mouth guards, it is your own responsibility to bring such.

In public areas, in stands, in the hostel, distance rules apply according to the Public Health Agency. See special signs at each location. Maximum 8 people when sitting at a table, empty chair between you and others in the stands, follow roadblocks and flows at training places, eateries etc.

When using common equipment, hands should be washed and / or sprayed before and after use.

Symptoms

If you experience symptoms that may indicate infection, you must not come to the competition venue. If you feel symptoms during the competition days, you must report this to the healthcare manager immediately (see phone number below) and then isolate yourself together with the team and/or those you share a room with at the designated place. You must also provide information about who you have been close to, lived with, etc. After that, you should quickly test yourself for covid and in the event of a negative answer consult with the healthcare manager for a decision on the right action. If you test positive, you must leave the competition site and isolate yourself, and others you have been close to must also test themselves quickly and observe special rules to prevent further spread of infection.

Accident or incident

In the event of an accident or incident, you must call for help via an official. We have our own healthcare expertise, ambulance and veterinarian during competition time. At other times, 112 is contacted directly for accidents and other incidents as well as the stable manager/stable guard for an incident with a horse.
